HOW TO CAN

HOW TO CAN BABY BEETS

The following recipe for canning baby beets is applicable to carrots. Only young, tender beets should be canned to get a high quality product. The best variety for canning is the Detroit.

Sort the beets, putting uniform sizes together. Cut the stems off, but be careful not to cut off too closely or break the root. This will cause loss of juice, color and flavor. Boil in an enameled pan until three-fourths done, peel, pack hot in layers in previously boiled jars, filling the second layer into the spaces left by the first layer and repeating. Cover with clear, hot water; partially seal the jars and boil them in a water bath for one hour continuously, counting from the time the water boils again around the jars.

Do not allow cold water to touch the beets after they have been cooked. If beets are packed in tin the can used must be inside-lacquered. Beets 1½ inch in diameter and over should be cut or sliced before packing into jars. When a steam-pressure canner is used, process pints 30 minutes under 5 pounds steam pressure—U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The Value of a Name.

If you were a German soldier wouldn't it make you mad all through to have your bread ration sliced in two just about the time you learned that those American soldiers you have to go up against are familiarly known as doughboys?—Louisville Herald.
